I visited the TINTIN: Herge's Masterpiece exhibition at Somerset House. I went into it knowing next to nothing about The Adventures of Tintin. I saw Spielberg's film adaption a few years back, and I don't really remember anything about it except that it was enjoyable. You see, I was born in the United States. In fact,...

Tintin: Herge's Masterpiece - Rizzoli New York

Perhaps a bad translation? Herge strikes me as a man with simple tastes - I don't know if he would appreciate this book by a purported 'friend'. And why all the focus on Castafiore? I like the Milanese Nightingale but there's no way she's a more important character than Calculus. Though I'd read anything Tintin related, this was a disappointment.
